PORTFOLIO · 2026

Eternal roses, composed as objects of design.

Crafted for permanence. Designed for distinction.

OUR STORY

Four generations, one obsession.

My name is Matteo di Rosa, and I come from a family in Italy that has worked with flowers for four generations.

I was raised between the cutting rooms and cold storage of my family's atelier — where my grandfather taught me that a single bloom, handled correctly, could carry an entire room. My father arranged the villas. My mother arranged the churches.

Les Fleurs Design is the form that inheritance takes here in Miami. I founded the studio to bring our family's craft — the patience, the obsession with material, the refusal to accept that beauty must be brief — into a new language. Real roses. Real ceramic. Real permanence.

What we make is the opposite of a cut bouquet: roses preserved at peak bloom, vessels hand-formed by independent artisans, objects engineered to last a year on a console, a front desk, a dining room, a private suite. The flowers are still real — they have simply been given more time.

THE COLLECTIONS

Three houses, one standard.

Maison Collection

RIBBED

Fluted vessels and full domes — the house signature, in every rose color.

Rosa Aeterna

ETERNAL BLOOM

Single-bloom studies in porcelain and stone — quiet, sculptural, exact.

David

SCULPTED FORM

A sculptural vessel in black and white — architecture for the bloom.

Every arrangement is composed in a hand-formed ceramic, porcelain, or stone vessel — no water, no upkeep, no wilt. Bespoke palettes, scales, and vessels are available on commission.

THE OBJECT

Considered from every angle.

Each piece is composed, photographed, and approved from every side — front, profile, and crown — before it leaves the atelier. Roses set petal by petal; vessels chosen for the room they'll hold.
